The fundamental reason for the quick economic recovery of West Germany can be found in the ordoliberal growth model. West Germany had a skilled workforce and a high technological level in 1946, but its capital stock had largely been destroyed during and after the war.

Wirtschaftswunder - Wikipedia

The West German Economy, 1945-1955 Schulte shows how the rear areas were constantly short of manpower, were prey to partisan reprisal and brigandage behind the front, and were staffed by older men who grumbled at their posting and connived at local acts of looting and violence.

The Schuman Declaration created the climate in which West Germany's economic miracle flourished. That evocative phrase describes Germany's extraordinary recuperation from the devastation of 1945. Weakened by hunger and shocked by the trauma of defeat and occupation, Germans toiled tirelessly to clear rubble, remove wreckage, reopen roads and railways, and rebuild houses, schools, and hospitals.

The Economic Development of Postwar Germany
Germany 1945-1950 - Problems of the 'Economic Miracle'. In 1945, Europe was devastated by the effects of the Second World War. The determination to reconstruct Europe was forged both from the disaster of war and from dreams of the creation of a stabilised and more equitable peace.

The year 1989 was the last year of the West German economy as a separate and separable institution. From 1990 the positive and negative distortions generated by German reunification set in, and the West German economy began to reorient itself toward economic and political union with what had been East Germany. The Understanding West German Economic Growth in the 1950s

About West German Economy, 1945-1955. This concise overview of the German 'Economic Miracle' of the post-World War Two reconstruction years argues that the German economy was in a far healthier position at the end of the war than previously thought, and that the preconditions for growth - a skilled and abundant labour supply and a favourable international political climate - facilitated the phenomenal 'recovery' and economic growth that was to follow.

History of Germany (1945–1990) - Wikipedia

East Germany had a command economy, similar to the economic system in the Soviet Union and other Comecon member states — in contrast to the market economies or mixed economies of capitalist states. The state established production targets, set prices, and also allocated resources, codifying these decisions in comprehensive plans. The means of production were almost entirely state-owned.

Economy of East Germany - Wikipedia

The post-war emergence of West Germany as the dominant economic power in Europe gave rise to the mythology of the 'economic miracle' and the model policies of the 'social market economy'. This study reveals a mundane reality of class politics in which democratic institutions have become increasingly marginalised by big capital and by an unelected central bank.

Not least because success stories were achieved in post-war
Western Europe with such a rich and varied array of policies.
Doubtless currency stabilization and some relaxation of price controls were crucial, but in themselves they hardly constituted an institutional revolution. For a critical view of Erhard, see Alan Kramer, The West German Economy 1945–1955 (New York: Berg, 1991).
